BS EN 12608-1-2016 -- The BS EN 12608-1-2016 standard is the European standard for cement which states the . the cantilever height is the same as that of the tubular element on which it is to be mounted. The shape or geometry of the coil can also be varied to suit the available environment in which the resonator is to be used. In the case of a resonant element fixed to a tubular element made up of two cylindrical elements, in particular the ends of which contain the coil, the end face of the coil which is opposite to the internal surface of the tubular element containing the coil is preferably the face of the coil opposite to the mounting face of the coil. The end face of the coil opposite to the wall of the tubular element containing the coil is then the face of the coil against which the adjusting element is pressing. In this case, in order to obtain maximum contact of the adjusting element with the face of the coil on the external face of the internal wall of the tubular element containing the coil, the adjusting element is preferably applied to the end face of the coil and the fixing element to the internal face of the external wall of the tubular element containing the coil, the same wall as that against which the face of the coil is pressed. In a variant of the tuning fork resonator according to the invention, the spring element of the adjusting element is preferably formed by a spring layer whose elasticity is less than that of the coil and whose end on the mounting face of the coil is welded to the end face of the coil remote from the mounting face of the coil. By virtue of this second variant, the adjusting element can be brought into contact with the face of the coil, it being possible to start oscillating the tuning fork resonator virtually immediately once it is mounted.
