2 Visitor Comments. BNSF Heritage Engine # 2566 in 2014 Shell schedule livery.Q: Logging to a global variable I am trying to use a global variable instead of logging to stdout inside of a function My use case is I want to log errors, and give some info such as function name, to be able to log the errors to a dashboard system I want to use a global variable because it's better to have a unified way of logging and ensure you can also use it in multiple scripts running concurrently This is the example I am trying def doSomething(): try: print("Function name:", __name__) # do something here except Exception as e: data = { "error": [ {"function": "doSomething", "line": e.line, "message": e.message}, ], } logging.error("Error occurred") logging.exception(data) Now, when I run the code, it generates C:\Users\myComputer\PycharmProjects\testing>python test.py NameError: name '__name__' is not defined My questions are: Why am I getting an undefined error If I have a variable, why can't I log into it? A: You could do something like that try: print("Function name:", __name__) # do something here except Exception as e: data = { "error": [ {"function": "doSomething", "line": e.line, "message": e.message}, ], } global _unsupported_rq

23 Jan 2018. CSX SD40-2 #8811 Discontinued after January 2008 with Overhaul at Kenosha, Wis. New CSX unit, #8811, based on the SD70M, arrives for CSX's Heritage Train program in MP2632. 1 NS SD60 #6692 at Calvert Cliffs, WV. A 1972 BNSF SD60 plows through PRMC#23, April 7, 1973. 7.5. Significant role of bradykinin B(1) receptor in cannabinoid-induced reinstatement of morphine withdrawal in mice. Pain is a major public health concern and the current chronic treatment of pain includes the use of opioids and non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs. However, these drugs are associated with various side effects. Recent studies indicated that an endogenous opioid peptide called bradykinin (BK), an endogenous ligand of the bradykinin B(1) receptor (BKB(1)), produced reinforcing effects by itself and could enhance the reward effect of other drugs. The aim of this study was to elucidate whether BK/BKB(1) signaling system is involved in cannabinoid-induced reinstatement of morphine withdrawal. In the present study, morphine dependence was induced in mice and the reinstatement of morphine withdrawal was examined by the administration of CB(1) receptor agonist and antagonist. To induce morphine dependence, naltrexone (6 mg/kg, i.p.) was administered 3 times at 2-h intervals and then challenged with morphine (5 mg/kg, i.p.) for 6 h daily for 5 days. The CB(1) receptor antagonist AM251 (5 mg/kg, s.c.), CB(1) receptor agonist WIN 55,212-2 (1 mg/kg, s.c.), the BK/BKB(1) receptor antagonist (D-Arg1, D-Pro2, D-Trp7,9, Leu11)-BK (10 nmol/mouse, i.c.v.), and BK itself (10 nmol/mouse, i.c.v.) were injected 30 min prior to cannabinoid administration. Cannabinoid (THC) and morphine were co-administered into the infra-imbual nucleus of the ventral tegmental area (VTA) and the ventral posteromedial nucleus of the thalamus (VPM), respectively.
