What's new:

Tom Cody "Clawface" Preston Jr. is a fictional character from the Fox animated television series The Simpsons. He is voiced by Eddie Murphy and was first introduced in the 1992 television special Lisa the Icon. He first appeared on the regular series in 1993-94 as one of the antagonistic Series 7 main antagonists. He is characterized as being a maniacal, brutal, and power-hungry individual. He has a distinctive appearance that includes makeup on the top of his face, as well as a scarred left eye, a cut-off left ear, a buzz cut, and trademark black-rimmed glasses. Character Clawface is voiced by Eddie Murphy. He was originally intended to be the main antagonist but after the debut episode, the writers developed a back story for him. He was later turned into a much more complex character. Much of the fact that Murphy's performance is so different from the character's character design is because he was never given a speaking role for two reasons. First, Smithers was originally written into the opening teaser, and Eddie Murphy was originally meant to voice Smithers. Second, in the early days of animating the characters, producers of the show were reluctant to have any animal references to the show because they thought that a reference to a lion would get them into trouble; as a result, Smithers was changed to a fish. Background In an early draft of the first episode of the series, the character was a woman who appeared to take Homer out to the woods and show him another world. In the script from the episode "Homer's Photo" it is said, "From this point on, it's the Clawface's way. We accept absolutely NO responsibility for what you see and hear from this point on." Clawface was originally meant to be a recurring character, but as the series progressed, he became a more integral part of the show. This back story was developed by Frank Mazzola, who wrote several episodes of the show in 1992. When these episodes were finally released as an animated movie, Lisa the Icon, he felt that the episode was a "letdown". In a later podcast, he was quoted as saying "I personally came to hate the character of the cut-off ear [and] the mouth through an edict from the man upstairs that I was to produce the 'voice' of a cartoon. People didn't know any other way to do him. If you ever wonder, if
