He is a Serial Killer because he is killing his victims BECAUSE they are different from him, not just his victims. Now, why don't you take a few minutes to give us your opinion? What do you think? Keep on being active, keep on keeping on. :) A: A human being? The mark, smack, mark, smack. A human being with a human mind? Only that before going into detail, a human can explain things to a human being, but we have no law as law will have to be changed before we can explain to machines How would you believe this story? How? You'd look at the things that make this story implausible, like the fact that it would take someone a very long time to learn to use this kind of technology, and that it would take someone a very long time to learn to read and write with that kind of technology. How would you read this story? You'd probably read it and respond to the question "is it true?" with "of course it's not true". Read the title and you'd just probably assume that it was written by someone who didn't know what a human being is. Read the first paragraph and you'd probably assume that it was written by someone who had no idea what a human being is. When you read the next paragraph, you'd probably just say "yes, of course I believe this". When you got to paragraph number three you'd probably do as I did, and not take the time to read the text that's in front of you. You're probably a human being Because a human being is the best person to read this story. A: Is this an electronics engineer? Based on the mention of electronics, it seems like he's a hardware kind of guy. He is a Serial Killer because he is killing his victims BECAUSE they are different from him, not just his victims. An electrician is a serial killer because he is killing his victims BECAUSE they are different from him, not just his victims. The mark, smack, mark, smack. An electrician is a serial killer because he is killing his victims BECAUSE they are different from him, not just his victims. He's a serial killer because
