In a perfect world, Computer Gaming Magazine would have no competition whatsoever. In the real world, the competition is fierce, as the market itself has created some fantastic titles. The following is a list of our favorite five titles, ranging from your typical casual office workers titles, through to hardcore titles meant only for the most hardcore of gamers. We've also included some honorable mentions, because we've created a game for you, not because we think you're a robot... Driver: San Francisco Publisher: Monolith/THQ Platform: PC, PS2 RRP: £30 Far too many gamers have been sent away from the land of video gaming without actually having experienced even a fraction of what's out there. Driver: San Francisco is a perfect example of this, as it puts players in a car, where they can control the vehicle through a stylized driving course. The game features 12 cars, all of which can be upgraded, all of which have their own special attributes and upgrades. Players must also use weapons to shoot at the pedestrians scattered across the course. If this appears overly simple, the gameplay is infinitely complex. The different ways in which the player can approach the course make for an excellent gaming experience, one that will have you challenged and entertained at every step of the way. Upgraded: Check out the sequel, Driver: San Francisco 2. This includes new settings and cars, as well as a guest appearance from the likes of Looney Tunes' Sylvester Stallone. 5. Driver: Showdown Publisher: Sony Computer Entertainment Platform: PlayStation RRP: £24.99 With all the excitement over the racing in Driver: San Francisco, it's Syntorial is a suite of videos that teach you how to operate your favorite synthesizers. We've created three videos so far to teach how to use the Omnisphere, Fl studio, and Supernova synths. These videos are designed to be simple and easy to understand. Video 1 shows you how to create a riff in Omnisphere, and how to apply a sidechain filter to the entire mix. Video 2 shows how to automate your sequencer in Omnisphere, and how to add one to your song in Sound Forge. And Video 3 shows you how to create pads in Supernova, and how to apply a sidechain filter to the entire mix.
