Drill into those connections to view the associated network performance suchÂ .Q: ASP.NET Web API - Why is any content in the body of a POST request ignored? I'm trying to create a simple Web API service using ASP.NET. In my controller's POST method, I have it look like this: [HttpPost] public HttpResponseMessage Create(Person person) {

HttpResponseMessage result = null; if (person == null) { result = Request.CreateResponse(HttpStatusCode.BadRequest, "Null person"); } return result; } If I send a POST request to my service with the body: {"Address":{"Line1":"123 Fake Street", "Line2":"City, State"}} For some reason, the API ignores the body and takes the body from the url to create the person. Is there something I can do to get my Web API to properly handle the body of a POST request? I've even tried to explicitly set HttpContent in my method signature to no avail. A: From the documentation: HttpRequestMessage Required if the content is not well-formed XML or JSON. This value is null if the content is well-formed XML or JSON. The HTTP message cannot contain any non-ASCII characters that are not used in XML (e.g., newline, tabs, carriage returns). You should pass in null. Q: Showing Text on Video Using the MediaPlayer in Android I am trying to show some text on the video while the video play and when user touch the video. I used the MediaPlayer. But the text don't show up. Here is my code.

private MediaPlayer mp1;
private boolean flag1; private TextView text1; private int duration1; private String
