Roblox is an online platform that allows players to create and host games and play with friends in a user-generated virtual world. It was created in 2004 as a gaming system first for children, but the platform's design allows children to use it after they turn 13. Roblox says that it now has over 165 million monthly active users worldwide, including more than 50 million children under 16. Half of all Robux is spent in the virtual world, the remainder of which is spent in Roblox. During the pandemic, Roblox has shifted more towards educational and social content. All content is self-hosted, meaning users can upload their own game content or use pre-packaged content. Roblox provides a program called Bloxy Studio for users to make their own games and saves money for its large userbase by not forcing Roblox developers to pay for the server costs. Roblox allows users to design their own homes and games. Users can build their own rooms or join existing communities. They can buy furniture, decorations and art for their homes or collaborate with their friends to create a collaborative gaming experience. ROBLOX'S COV-19 SURGE: THE IN-GAME BACKDROP As of August 2020, Roblox is the most popular free online game platform with over 155 million monthly active users and more than 50 million children under the age of 16. In March 2009, Roblox launched the "Aiana Server", which allowed players to battle and trade resources with each other, allowing a larger-scale game with the backing of Roblox's content creators. In 2011, Roblox introduced a second server, the Roblox Adventure Server, which allowed players to create their own adventures, quests and side quests for their friends to play through. That same year, Roblox introduced the Studio. Players could customize everything from their avatars and rooms to the look and feel of their avatars and their homes. In 2013, Roblox launched the Audience Network. Audience Network allowed users to play their avatars in a game for the purposes of advertising, and also allowed advertisers to use the Audience Network as a platform to market themselves. In the second half of the 2010s, Roblox continued to grow, offering more features, making the platform more social and allowing for longer game sessions. According to the New York Times, Roblox is the most popular company in the "platform"
