The second annual Architecture Week was held recently in the city of Baie-d'Urfé, in the province of Quebec. The event is organized by the Municipality of Baie-d'Urfé, in partnership with the Centre de recherche en management du projet, the SAQ arts council, the Desjardins Association of Baie-d'Urfé and the Bureau d'architecture de l'Outaouais. The theme for this year's event was the Baie-d'Urfé park. The building code is now nearly 25 years old. New designs are changing the concept of the city's landscape. The municipality has been looking for ways to make it attractive and inviting in order to promote the urban renewal project. An excellent panel of experts provided the audience with the latest information about design in Quebec and the problems of building in Canada. This year's jurors were the Canadian architect Robert Chu, the interior designer Joséé Noël, the water architect Patrick Boisselle, and the urban designer Louis-Gilles Lapointe.
