Error: You tried to open a PDF file that is protected with Adobe or Apple .Q: GPG encryption from shell before remote ssh logins I'm trying to automate a security process of running this line at the command line before an ssh login: ssh-add -K I've tried using expect, but I am getting the following message: $ ssh-add -K /usr/bin/expect: line 44: /usr/bin/expect*: No such file or directory I've tried running the command using expect, and it still gives the same error. The script I am trying to create is: #!/usr/bin/expect -f # set timeout 10 spawn ssh-add -K interact Does anyone know why this error message is coming up, or any suggestions on how I can go about resolving it? A: expect is a program designed to interact with a child process. To directly run commands from standard input, you need to spawn the child process with the -c option: expect -c'spawn ssh-add -K' See this Q&A for more details. Revolutionary Society of Saint-Simonian Religion and Liberty of Brest The Revolutionary Society of Saint-Simonian Religion and Liberty of Brest was a utopian religious group founded in 1810 in Brest, a port city in northeastern France. It was a branch of the Saint-Simonian movement established in Lyons in 1809 and led by Charles Fourier. The Brest branch was also known as the Fourierists (ouvriers) or the Idealsists (idéalistes), because Fourierism was the center of their religious movement. The revolution it called for was a definitive break with tradition and the establishment of a new society based on the ideals of liberty and equality. The Society of Saint-Simonians proclaimed the brotherhood of man and the universal right to work and that labor should be performed by free and equal citizens. The Fourierists had begun a utopian work, Almanack of the Religion of Humanity, in 1808 and distributed it in many cities by 1812. In 1810, a new society was formed in Brest, which gave the name Idealsists. Although they were a sect of Saint-Simonians, the Fourierists and 6d1f23a050
