Tuberculosis is the leading infectious cause of lymphadenitis in the United States. Diagnosis is often difficult and invasive tissue biopsy is necessary. Our goal was to demonstrate the usefulness of fine needle aspiration cytology (FNAC) in the diagnosis and management of tuberculous lymphadenitis. We reviewed 35 patients with tuberculous lymphadenitis diagnosed by FNAC over a 36-month period. Based on cytologic results, patients were divided into three groups: (1) predominant polymorphonuclear cell (PMN) response (14 patients), (2) predominant lymphocytic cell response (12 patients), and (3) mixed response (5 patients). A cytologic finding of lymphoma was made in two cases. Patients presenting with PMN predominance on FNAC were most frequently identified with cervical lymphadenitis, with 13 of 14 patients having cervical lymphadenitis. Additionally, in patients with cervical lymphadenitis, the site of disease process correlated with PMN predominance in the FNAC. Patients presenting with a lymphocytic predominance were more likely to have axillary lymphadenitis; 11 of 12 were associated with axillary lymphadenitis. Fine needle aspiration biopsy was an excellent diagnostic modality that provides noninvasive data sufficient to plan therapeutic intervention.Q: Synchronous mutating table error with swift 5 Firebase Realtime Database I'm working on a new version of my app and I'm having issues syncing data. I am implementing a table view that updates its view based on a sync function that retrieves the data from Firebase. The problem is that the app crashes, I get this error: Synchronous mutating table synchronization is not supported. Either disable a mutation or set a delete rule for the path. Because of that, I disabled dynamic updates, according to the documentation: `static func disableDynamicMutations() {`
