But what if it's not just the next Musk idea that seems like the only real option, but the only real option left? And that's not just a hypothetical, but what's happening to Dougherty, the town you've probably never heard of but for those living here is the 6th most expensive zip code in America. The very idea of a drone colony is counterintuitive to most Nevadans, but that's exactly the position the community finds itself in. The Northern Nevada Desert Policy Act (NNDPA) is a bill introduced to Congress in August 2014 that proposes a ban on UAS (unmanned aerial system) operations across 12 million acres, or 62 percent of the Nevada desert — larger than the state of California. The wide-ranging bill would target new UAS operations in the area as well as any drone services operating in the region. This proposal came from three of Nevada's most prominent billionaires — Elon Musk, Larry Ellison and Las Vegas Sands Corporation CEO Sheldon c6a93da74d
