Help? A: The driver is XP32 and there is no need to download a universal driver.

Q: What is difference between these two statements Can anyone tell me, what is the difference between these two statements(whether these statements are syntactically correct or not)? I always got confused between them. I tried searching in Google but couldn't find an answer. 1) if (!isset($_SESSION['last_session']) && (isset($_SESSION['username']))) { echo "Hi, ".$_SESSION['username']."; } 2) if (!isset($_SESSION['last_session']) || (isset($_SESSION['username'])) { echo "Hi, ".$_SESSION['username']."; } A: 1: you need a = because of the binary or you use (!== instead of!= because of PHP 5.0.5) 2: you need the logical or (||) instead of the logical and (&&) because of PHP 5.0.5 Both will evaluate to the same. You could use the ternary operator for example: $var = $_SESSION['last_session']; if (isset($_SESSION['username'])){ echo $var? "Hi, ".$_SESSION['username']."": ""; } The only difference is the ternary operator is the shorter to write In general, the stability, action cycle, and the like of an insect repellent have been studied in response to the development of the modern society in the 21st century, and also, a variety of research for development of a product for repelling, for example, cockroaches, ants, and the like has been actively carried out. Moreover, the Ministry of Agriculture, Food, and Rural Affairs has declared to inspect the safety of an insect repellent, saying that the medical consequences of the insect repellent can be checked only after the regulatory approval, and it is recommended to use the insect repellent in a manner of refraining from direct contact with skin of animals, children, babies, and the like. Meanwhile, the social problem occurred by an insect (insecticide) in a variety of fields has been greatly emphasized c6a93da74d
